Dear Mr. Cerisano,

Thank you for taking the time to contact us with regards to your concern with TD Canada Trust. As Customer Care Manager, your concern regarding false information on your profile has been forwarded to me for further review and response.

Let me reassure you that TD Canada Trust strives to provide our customers with a comfortable banking experience at all times, and we are genuinely concerned when we have fallen short of meeting that goal. Please accept my apologies for any frustration this matter may have caused.

Mr. Cerisano after further review of your concern, we can confirm that the transaction in question was done on Feb 8th 2010. An Empty envelop deposit for $800 was made in your account and $200 were taken out at the same time. As a result of the empty envelop deposit, we recovered the full funds from your account on Feb 10th 2010. In light of your concern, as a courtesy we have removed the message from your account. At this time we do not have more details on the events surrounding the Empty Envelop deposit made in 2010 as it is out of our retention period of 7 years.

Hope the information provided is sufficient and helps resolve your concern. For more information about our Customer Problem Resolution Process, please refer to our "If you have a complaint" brochure. It can also be found online at www.td.com within the "Contact Us" section. Your business is very important to us. Thank you once again for bringing your concern to our attention, and for allowing me the opportunity to respond.

Sincerely,

Ayesha Minhas
Customer Care Manager

TD Secure Email

Dear Sirs/Mesdames,

I have reviewed the information I received from TD Canada Trust. It contains a false report of an empty envelope being deposited into a TD bank machine on Bay& Bloor in 2010. It also has a comment that it is marked for deletion.

Allow me to re-state:

- * I have no knowledge of this event ever occurring. I also was not notified of this event.
- * I request a complete list of all entities TD shared this false information with.
- * I also request this note be removed immediately and all other involved entities be similarly updated with the corrected information.

I will continue to escalate this matter until such a time I feel that damages to my reputation have been repaired. Please get used to hearing from me, all of you.
